

Slaughter business receives International Bulk Journal award

For two consecutive years, Anvil Attachments has won a prestigious International Bulk Journal (IBJ) award. The IBJ awards salute achievements in the maritime bulk industry. The 2013 ceremony was held in Paris, France and featured the biggest and best companies in the bulk cargo industry.

Following Anvil's 2012 win of the "Best Grab" award, Anvil was nominated to the shortlist in two categories for the 2013 competition. Those categories were "Best Grab" and "People Development."

The "People Development" award shows how companies have improved the training of staff by identifying needs and implementing schemes. This award positions the winner as being forward-thinking through commitment to investing in its people operating in the bulk shipping or cargo handling business. Anvil won this award through its innovative work with the local schools in East Feliciana Parish.

Anvil works closely with school leaders developing and improving training classes such as welding and machining. Anvil is especially proud of this award as they were competing against some of the largest companies from around the world, including, GAC from the United Arab Emirates, Abu Dhabi Ports from the United Arab Emirates and Liebherr from Austria.

The "Best Grab" category is judged on companies who consistently meet customer requirements for operationally efficient, cost-effective grabs and are aware that grabs should ideally be adopted to each bulk community. While Anvil did not win "Best Grab" this year, it is a tremendous accomplishment to make the final short list.

Anvil is proud to represent East Feliciana Parish. From the employees in the company to the products that they manufacture;

Anvil is not only a leader in the US, but one of the top companies in the world.
